Restriction is required under 35 U.S.C. 121 and 372.

This application contains the following inventions or groups of inventions which are not so linked as to form a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1.

In accordance with 37 CFR 1.499, applicant is required, in reply to this action, to elect a single invention to which the claims must be restricted.

Group I, claim(s) 1-10, drawn to a gaming device for playing a game, the gaming device comprising a memory storing data structure associated with game configurations.

Group II, claim(s) 11, drawn to a method of controlling a game, the game comprising one or more parameters and associated each one of a plurality of device configurations with a respective game configuration, wherein each game configuration differently specifies one or more parameters of the game.

Group III, claim(s) 12-15, drawn to a gaming system comprising a server, the server comprising a memory storing a data structure associated with game configurations.

Group IV, claim(s) 16-19, drawn to a client device for playing game, the client device transmitting information to a server.

The inventions listed as Groups I-IV do not relate to a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1 because, under PCT Rule 13.2, they lack the same or corresponding special technical features for the following reasons:

Group I and II lack unity of invention because the groups do not share the special technical feature of a gaming device comprising a memory storing data structure associated with game configurations. For example, Group I requires a gaming device to store memory storing game configurations, whereas the method of controlling a game (Group II) may have game configurations in stored in memory device separate from the gaming device.

Group I and III lack unity of invention because Group I does not require the technical feature of a server, the server comprising a memory storing a data structure as required by Group III. Furthermore, Group III does not require the technical feature of a memory storing a data structure within the gaming device as required by Group I.

Group I and IV lack unity of invention because Group I does not require the technical feature of transmitting information to a server. Furthermore, Group IV does not require the technical feature of a memory storing a data structure within the gaming device as required by Group I.

Group II and III lack unity of invention because Group II does not require the technical feature of a server, the server comprising a memory storing a data structure as required by Group III. For example, Group III requires a server to store memory storing game configurations, whereas the method of controlling a game (Group II) may have game configurations stored in memory device separate from the server.

Group II and IV lack unity of invention because Group II does not require the technical feature of transmitting information to a server. Furthermore, Group IV does not require the technical feature of a game comprising one or more parameters and associated each one of a plurality of device configurations with a respective game configuration, wherein each game configuration differently specifies one or more parameters of the game, as required by Group II.

Group III and IV lack unity of invention because the groups do not share the same technical feature of a server, the server comprising a memory storing a data structure. For example, Group III requires a server to store memory storing game configurations, whereas the client device of Group IV may store the game configurations within a memory of the client device.

A telephone call was made to Christopher Ward on 7/22/09 to request an oral election to the above restriction requirement, but did not result in an election being made.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include (i) an election of a species or invention to be examined even though the requirement may be traversed (37 CFR 1.143) and (ii) identification of the claims encompassing the elected invention.

The election of an invention or species may be made with or without traverse. To preserve a right to petition, the election must be made with traverse. If the reply does not distinctly and specifically point out supposed errors in the restriction requirement, the election shall be treated as an election without traverse.

Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Jasson H. Yoo whose telephone number is (571)272-5563. The examiner can normally be reached on 9:00am - 5:00pm.
